HISTORICAL SKETCH

The University of Texas is a state institution, ordained by the constitution, located by popular vote, endowed and maintained by legislative grants.

The idea of a university for Texas is as old as Texas. The Declaration of Texas Independence, March 2, 1836, has for one of the main counts in its indictment against the government of Mexico the following: "It has failed to establish any public system of education, although possessed of almost boundless resources (the public domain), and although it is an axiom in political science that, unless a people are educated and enlightened, it is idle to expect the continuance of civil liberty or the capacity of self-government." In accordance with the doctrine thus proclaimed, the first constitution of the republic declares it to be the duty of congress "to provide, as soon as circumstances will permit, * * * a general system of education."

The University, as it happened, was the portion of the educational system first to receive the attention of the Congress of the Republic of Texas. On November 20, 1837, "Mr. Douglass introduced a bill to incorporate the University of Texas."

The first direct steps towards the founding of the University were taken by the congress of the republic in two acts passed during January, 1839. One of these provided for the setting apart of land for a campus in the future city of Austin. The other appropriated fifty leagues of the vacant lands of the republic for the purpose of university education.

The establishment of the University was provided for by an act of the Legislature, February 11, 1858. The preamble of this act reads as follows: "Whereas, from the earliest time, it has been the cherished design of the people of the republic and of the state of Texas that there shall be established within her limits an institution of learning for the instruction of the youths of the land in the higher branches of learning and in the liberal arts and sciences, and to be so endowed, supported, and maintained as to place within the reach of our people, whether rich or poor, the opportunity of conferring upon the sons of the state a thorough education, and as a means whereby the attachment of the young men of the state to the interests, the institutions, the rights of the state, and the liberties of the people might be encouraged and increased, and to this end liberal appropriations have been made; and whereas, the increase of population and wealth of the state, and the tendency of events, indicate the fitness of now putting the cherished design into effect; therefore," etc. This act made provision for the endowment of the University by adding to the fifty leagues granted in 1839 one hundred thousand dollars in United States bonds, and one section of land out of every ten reserved for the use of the state by the various acts of the legislature.

Provision was also made for the organization of the University, but this was not carried out because of the Civil War and the unhappy era of Reconstruction. Indeed, under the exigencies of war, all but 57 cents of the cash endowment of the University had been turned into the general revenue account and appropriated to the necessities of the state. By direction of the constitution of 1866 the legislature refunded nearly half of the amount previously diverted, and the same constitution provided that "the legislature shall, at an early day, make such provision by law as will organize and put in operation the University." But the times were unpropitious, and the organization was still delayed.

Provision for the organization and the maintenance of the University was again made in the constitution of 1876, as follows: "Sec. 10. The legislature shall, as soon as practicable, establish, organize, and provide for the maintenance, support, and direction of a university of the first class, to be located by a vote of the people of this state, and styled 'The University of Texas,' for the promotion of literature, and the arts and sciences, including an agricultural and mechanical department." This constitution took away from the endowment the nearly three million acres of land which had been added to it by the act of 1858, and gave in lieu thereof one million acres further west. It made the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, which had been established a short time before and located in Brazos county, a branch of the University "for instruction in agriculture, the mechanic arts, and the natural sciences connected therewith," and provided for the subsequent organization of "a college or branch university" for the instruction of the colored youths of the state. To the lands previously set apart and appropriated for the endowment, the legislature, in 1883, added one million acres. The Agricultural and Mechanical College has remained in fact a separate institution and the "colored" branch has not yet been begun.

The act of the legislature providing for the organization of the University was passed in 1881. It provided for the location of the institution by popular vote, and for the appointment of a Board of Regents, to be entrusted with its organization and government. Among the provisions of the act affecting the policy of the University may be mentioned the limitation of the matriculation fee to thirty dollars, the admission of men and women on equal terms without charge for tuition, and the injunction that no religious qualification should be required for admission to any office or privilege connected with the University, that no sectarian instruction should be given therein, and that no money may be appropriated from the general revenue of the State for the construction of buildings.

By popular election in September, 1881, the Main University was located at Austin, and the Medical Department at Galveston. Under authority of the regents the Academic and Law Departments were organized, and on September 15, 1883, the University was formally opened in the present Main Building, then consisting of the west wing only. The exercises were, however, conducted in the temporary capital, since burned, until the first day of January, 1884.

In 1894 the Department of Engineering was inaugurated, in 1898 the Summer Schools, in 1906 the Department of Education, in 1909 the Department of Extension, in 1910 the Graduate Department.

The Department of Medicine was opened with the School of Medicine in 1891, following the donation of the John Sealy Hospital to the state by the city of Galveston. The School of Pharmacy was added in 1893, the School of Nursing in 1897.

The School of Mines at El Paso is under the charge of the President and Regents of the University but is not legally a part of the University.

The following figures indicate briefly the growth of the University through the Session of 1915-16.

Year.	Registration		Professors. & Instructors.	Total Expenditures.
	Long Session.	Summer.	Long Session.
1885-86	999	0	13	$63,822
1895-96	730	0	35	128,625
1905-06	1,547	444	73	254,358
1915-16	2,729	1,265	176	759,023
1883-16	36,259			8,866,962

Of the total expenditures, $5,189,690 have been met from Legislative appropriations, two-thirds of the remainder from land leases and one-third from interest on bonds bought with the proceeds of the sale of the original land grant of 50 leagues (220,000 acres).

The income from the leasing of the 2,000,000 acres of University lands to cattlemen has risen from nothing at all to $176,369 in 1915-16.

Excluding donations, $226,694 has been expended for buildings at Galveston, $1,065,081 at Austin.

The libraries, collections and the general and laboratory equipment have cost about $700,000. The total assets exclusive of the University lands are about $3,000,000.

During 1883-88 the percentage of women was 22, during 1911-16 it was 32.

During the years 1883-1916, 5,119 degrees have been given, distributed as follows: Bachelor of Arts, 1,407; LL. B., 1,543; M. D., 645; Ph. G., 307; M. A., 242; B. The name of the institution by which it has been conferred follows the academic degree. The omission of it indicates that the degree was given by the University of Texas.

A star (*) after a name denotes that the individual is deceased.

When an address appears in parenthesis it denotes that it is the last known address.

In the case of married women, former students, the name under which the student entered is given first, with the married name immediately following in parenthesis, the same rule applying to the General Index. In the Locality Index, the graduates are listed under their married names. For example: Class List insertion—May Jane Smith (Mrs. John M. Jones); General Index insertion—Smith, May Jane (Mrs. John M.
